GOOD WAR NEWS.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20. The indication is that it will fall to General Pershing to lead an American army to strike the blow in an effort to invade Germany. Nobody here knows exactly where the blow will fall, but that it will be a decisive blow is generally believed. The German front is generally believed to be a small taste of what the American army captured the village of, less than five miles from the German front. The German front was brought well within the range of heavy American field guns. The American troops have been pushing forward. Pershing will be guided wholly by the decision of Marshal Foch in attacking any major movement.

Letter from Augusta.

AUGUSTA, ME., Aug. 17, 1918. Last Thursday there was a meeting of the Republican editors of Maine at the Augusta House, at which the fraternity was well represented. The writer was privileged to represent The Journal although he cannot claim to be but an amateur. The members of the Republican State committee and several other prominent members of the party were present. The dinner was served in the annex dining room where a table was laid for 50 guests and every seat was taken. The company came as the guests of the publishers and editors of the Portland Evening Express. Governor Milliken was seated at one end of the table and at the opposite end were Chairman Ham of the Republican State Committee and Will H. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee who had expressed a wish to meet and confer with the knights of the stub pencil. Another reason for the meeting was to give an opportunity for the editors to form an organization, which should assist in a systematic way the successful progress of this campaign. This organization was effected by the choice of J. Norman Towle as chairman, Arthur G. Staples as secretary and treasurer and R. Wornwood, G. R. Chadbourne and L. P. Evans as executive committee. Before this was done however the table was cleared and a two hours conference followed. Chairman Ham in a few well chosen sentences called on Governor Milliken to present to the editors and the other gentlemen in the company, the facts relative to the much discussed matters concerning reclassification and the so-called dependency law. What the Governor said was better and more convincing than a speech. It can better be described by saying that it impressed the listeners as being an earnest, and absolutely truthful heart-to-heart recital, given without the slightest evasion of detail. In referring to the matter of reclassification the Governor said that the matter of reclassification first came from Washington not as an order but as a suggestion. He decided to take no action, but not long after orders came from Gen. Crowder to re-classify Mr. Hays said in corroboration that reclassification was ordered in his State, Indiana. Of course Gov. Milliken had to obey the order. Very soon a protest was made and chiefly through the efforts of Senators Fernald and Hale General Crowder was induced to rescind his order. In regard to the dependency law the Governor said that being in doubt concerning the proper interpretation of that law, he obtained the advice of the Attorney General and other legal authorities and proceeded in accordance with their advice. When he had finished those who were present felt that the truth about these matters had been told and that the criticisms of the Governor which had been made was a kind of politics which ought to be adjourned. Owing to lack of time Mr. Hays made a brief speech, but every sentence breathed patriotism and not a word was tainted by partisanship. In an assembly of twenty well dressed men, all strangers, one of them being Mr. Hays, it is unlikely that an observer would consider Mr. Hays to be the Chairman of the Republican National Committee. He is a man about 36 years of age, of medium height, there is not an ounce of superfluous flesh on him and I should judge would weigh about 140 pounds. He seems to be physically fit to make a great record in the coming political Marathon. His mind is both alert and cultivated as may be proved by reading his speeches or an article contributed by him to the August number of the Forum. His energy is tremendous. He is more than a live wire. He is a dynamo. He is tireless as the sun. Last Tuesday night he left New York at 6 p. m., arrived in Bangor about 10 the next forenoon, shook hands with people all the rest of the day and in the evening addressed an audience of 3,000. The next morning, Thursday, he motored to Augusta, left there at 4 p. m., and Friday forenoon we had a telegram from him in New York asking for information concerning a political matter of importance in this State. Words fail to describe this man. When he speaks he shows his real power, and after one has talked with him five minutes he feels that he must have known him for years.

The New Belfast Fair.

The New Belfast fair will be held Sept. 10th and 11th. Keep those dates in mind for nothing has been overlooked in any of the departments to make this fair the largest, most instructive and entertaining ever held. Do not fail to attend both days as it will be the biggest event of the year. The fair management have spared no pains this year and it is their intention to go clear "Over the Top." Get in the big drive the first day and you will be sure not to miss anything. All resolve to go and all say to each other "Let's Go." Arrangements have been made to take care of a large number of cattle. New stalls have been erected and painted and as good accommodations will be found anywhere in Maine. Liberal premiums have been offered in the agricultural department and in the ladies fancy work department. There are five classes for draft horses and oxen and it is promised that the Boys' and Girls' Club department, in which very liberal premiums have been offered, will be one of the best exhibits ever seen. Remember that The New Belfast Fair had the best exhibit in this department last year of any fair in the State. Two prizes are offered in the Red Cross department. The County Agent, N. S. Donahue, is arranging for a plowing contest with tractor engines and it is promised that this will be very interesting to farmers. This contest will take place at ten o'clock in the forenoon of each day and it is hoped that several tractors with plowing appliances will be on the grounds. This will be a great opportunity for farmers interested to get a line on the kind of machinery that is useful and practical along these lines. Anyone desiring a fair catalog giving all the particulars in relation to premiums offered in the several departments will receive one by making applications to H. C. Buzzell, Sec'y of The New Belfast Fair, Belfast, Me.

MARTIN FREEMAN RANDALL.

Somewhere in France, July 19th, Martin Freeman Randall, a Belfast lad of less than eighteen years, was killed in action and his name is now recorded on the world's hero's roll of honor. He gave his life willingly and his last letter home to his only sister, Miss Mildred K. Randall of Belfast, was full of courage and faith that the Allies would win. He also urged her not to worry, saying that he was going again to the trenches, but that he would be safe. He was born in Belfast, the only son of the late John McGilvery and Lena (Knowlton) Randall and was left an orphan early in life. His paternal grandmother, Mrs. Amelia Carter of Belfast, cared for the children as long as she lived. Little Martin lived for a number of years in the family of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Wing of North Belfast and drove their milk team for some time, making friends with all who met the manly little lad. About four years ago the Wings went to St. Louis, Mo., and Martin went with them. He was large of his age and patriotic as he was manly and soon enlisted in the regular Army. He went to France with the first of Pershing's men and was attached to the signal corps of the headquarters company of the 15th Infantry. He was the first Belfast born boy to fall fighting under the Stars and Stripes and the city mourns its loss and will always revere his memory. This young hero's life's mission was fulfilled before he reached his majority, but his days were not long on life's dial. He would have been only eighteen in September next. It is hoped by all that his young sister may have the satisfaction of learning later just where and under what circumstances he paid this supreme sacrifice, which he so willingly did. Tuesday Albert K. Fogg received the following letter: Dear Cousin Albert:—I received your letter and was glad to hear from you. Also received two bundles of papers. We have just come out of the trenches for a few days' rest. I received a letter from Parker Blodgett. Don't know how he got my address unless you gave it to him, but he did not mention you. Expect to go back to the trenches soon. Cannot write any more at this time. Love to all and write soon. Martin F. Randall. P. S. I enclose a post card which I took off the body of a dead German after the battle at Cantigny. July 10, 1918.

Second Maine, now the 103rd Infantry, in April, 1917, at Skowhegan, and was in training at Waterville and Augusta, later going to Westfield, Mass., leaving the latter place in September, 1917, for France. He was severely wounded July 18th, last. His many friends, both in Waldo and Cumberland counties, as well as in other parts of the State, hope for his speedy recovery. St. Francis Parish's Successful Lawn Fete.

The lawn fete at the parish grounds of the St. Francis Catholic church, August 14th and 15th, was very well directed, netting the unusual sum of $300. Rev. Fr. Timothy J. O'Mahony, the resident priest, was assisted by the following committee: Punch, Misses Mary Owen and Elizabeth Marsano, with the Misses Charlotte B. Wadsworth, Alice Spear and Isabel Cooper assisting. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Shea furnished all the supplies at this booth, which gave good financial returns for a most delicious beverage. The fancy work table was presided over by Miss Julia Leary, assisted by Mrs. Bertha Leary. The large and handsome centre piece, disposed of by ticket, went to William Leary with ticket 148, drawn by S. A. Parker. The food table containing hot frankfurts was in charge of Walter Juan, assisted by Mrs. Patrick Troy and Mrs. Mary Robbins. The delicious looking cake at this table also went with ticket 148, held by little Annie Rooney of Saturday Cove. The ice cream table did a thriving business under the direction of Hewie Looney and Nora Maroy. Mrs. George H. Darby closed out a very large supply in the spacious grab basket. At the chance tables, the shooting gallery was conducted by Rev. Fr. Achard of Providence, R. I., and the doll and ball sport by Rev. Fr. Morrissey of Toronto, guests of Fr. O'Mahony.

The well clipped lawn in every direction around the church and parish house was well lighted by colored electric. The booths were all in red, white and blue and decorated with large bouquets of garden flowers, showing careful attention and good taste.

The program for the two evenings included vocal solos by Charles F. Hammons, Thelma Smith, Agnes Hill, Doris Robbins, Helen Troy, with Miss Julia Littlefield accompanist; piano solo by Miss Marguerite H. Owen; costume dances by Misses Olive Morse and Ernestine Webber; readings from Robert Service's poems by Miss Sabra B. Dyer. A patriotic tableau closed the program and was prettily staged on the platform erected in front of the garage, with Miss Agnes Hill posing as Columbia and little Katherine Pendleton as color bearer, with Master Bernard Hammons representing the Army and Ernestine Webber the Navy. The audience joined the group in singing Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean, and the Star Spangled Banner.

The brief address by Thomas E. Shea, a member of St. Francis, and beloved by all who know him, held the closest attention of his large audience, which included representatives of all the city churches, with friends from Rockland and Bangor and all along the line, where he is well known. He began with his first visit to Belfast 29 years ago, of meeting people here who have always remained friends with him. He attended Catholic services, then held in the High school building, where he met Mr. Wm. Brannagan whose love for his faith had made the present church and parish house possible. He referred to meeting Mrs. Shea on his second year here and of their marriage as the first in this attractive little church. Mr. Shea spoke as a loyal Catholic of what his people had done in all the wars and closed with a most dramatic interpretation of that rare patriotic poem, Sheridan's Ride. So vivid was his portrayal of this hero of old and his black charger could be seen in imagination as never before. In response to an encore, Mr. Shea gave a vivid word picture of what he has faith to believe his church will do in the reconstruction period that is to follow this world war to help save the country from socialism and labor troubles.

Father O'Mahony thanked all for their attendance and hearty co-operation and said the splendid sum realized was a measure largely due to their assistance, although the parish committee had worked industriously and long as their part. He spoke of the cordial reception he received when coming here and of the good fellowship he was enjoying. He closed with a glowing tribute to Mr. Shea, "the honored guest of the evening and Mrs. Shea, his able assistant."

Fathers O'Mahony, Achard and Morrissey were entertained at dinner at Fernald, North Shore, the Shea summer home, Friday at 6 o'clock.

Father O'Mahony gave a sailing party Friday to the children who took part in the program. In the Decrow launch Louise they sailed to Islesboro and had a picnic dinner on the Islesboro shore.

GRAY-CLARK. George Herbert Gray, now a military police of Company 36 at Camp Devens, where he has been four months, and Miss Denice E. Clark of Belfast were married at the Methodist parsonage at 7.30 p. m., Aug. 18th. Rev. Charles W. Martin officiated with the single ring service. They were unattended. The bride wore a simple gown of white voile with lace trimmings and a becoming white hat. The groom was in his khaki uniform. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Gray of Belfast and his bride the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar L. Clark of Belmont. She has been employed for some time in the Leonard & Barrows shoe factory. Later she will join her husband in Ayer, Mass. They received many beautiful gifts including cut glass, sterling and linen. A reception was given them Saturday evening at the home of the groom's parents, when over 40 were present.

THE REASON WHY.

Several months ago we were asked to conserve in the use of sugar for two months till the new crop came forward to the market. At the expiration of that time sugar was still scarce and we were asked to conserve a little while longer so that sugar could be saved for preserving. The berry season has now passed and meanwhile we have been able to obtain very little sugar for any purpose and the scarcity is now so great that Mr. Endicott, the Food Administrator for the State of Massachusetts, has asked that adults in his State abstain entirely from the use of sugar for two months. It is possible, if not probable, that from a scarcity we are to enter upon a famine as far as sugar is concerned. Statistics show that something like this was inevitable and those who had conservation in charge should have been able to foresee it and should have made the facts known to the public, instead of letting things drift along till most people felt that they had been deceived. In 1915 the United States produced 207,708 tons of cane sugar, 9,000 tons of maple sugar and 625,314 tons of beet sugar, a total of 842,022 tons. Add to this 506,555 tons, the surplus from Hawaii, 331,103 from Porto Rico, and 44,520 from the Philippines and we have a total of 1,724,300 tons as the entire sugar resources of the United States in 1915. During that year our consumption of sugar was 3,743,139 tons, of which we had to import 2,018,849 tons. Cuba produced a surplus of about 2,000,000 tons and we there obtained most of our importations. This year we get very little from there and the chief reason for this is that we fixed the price of sugar. The world's price for sugar is higher than our price, and Cuban sugar is going, most of it, to the world's market. We cannot get sugar from other large sugar producing countries for these three reasons: Our price is less than the world's price, the production in sugar raising countries is much less now than it was three years ago and ships are lacking for freighting. Much can be said in criticism of the price fixing of commodities, but in this case it certainly has prevented profiteering and sky rocket prices, and opinions differ as to whether we should have economized or bought Cuban sugar at a high price.

The sugar produced in Germany in 1915 was 2,732,189 tons; in Austria, 1,919,853 tons; in Russia 1,383,754 tons; in France 978,838 tons; in Java 1,331,180 tons. Almost half the world's sugar was produced in these countries. The first four countries are not now producing any surplus sugar, and, as we have said, that of Java is too far away to be available in any large degree to us or our allies. So it is perfectly easy to understand why sugar is scarce in the United States and that it will not again be abundant for a long time. Our present allowance of 2 pounds a month per capita will require 1,250,000 tons a year. We produced this year about 850,000 tons. The writer has no means of knowing how much we shall get from Hawaii and Porto Rico, but probably just about enough to insure our ability to maintain our present allowance were it not for the necessity for sending large quantities from our supply to our Allies and to our soldiers, who must not be put on short rations of sugar or any other food necessity. Mr. Endicott has probably examined the sugar question in the light of existing conditions and therefore realizes that if we are to supply our soldiers with sugar we must ourselves abstain from its use, if not now, in the not distant future.

CREEL'S CRUDENESS.

George Creel explained his thank-God-for-unpreparedness speech by saying that if we were getting ready for war when we were appealing to the law of nations in our notes to Germany we should have stupefied ourselves. The history of the United States has record of several instances when preparations for war were undertaken before war was declared, but we need refer to only two of them. When Mr. Roosevelt was President the German fleet was sent to Venezuela for the purpose of intimidating the people of that little country and thus making them pay some questionable debts. The Monroe doctrine called for action on the part of the United States. Our vigorous American President prepared our Navy and ordered Dewey to sail to these waters to meet the German fleet, although diplomatic exchanges were in progress between Berlin and Washington. We prepared to fight and settled by agreement. In the summer of 1916 President Wilson sent a large force of the National Guard into Mexico while negotiations between that country and ours were going on for the solution of our troubles there and on the border. What has Mr. Creel to say to that? We say that when Mr. Wilson sent troops there he acted wisely in sending them, although what they were allowed to do after their arrival has been criticised. When Germany sunk the Lusitania it was an act of war. She shook the mailed fist in our face. We should then have prepared to fight. Had we done so we should have been spared much humiliation, much treasure and much loss of the nation's best blood. It was our neglect of preparedness which stupefied us in the eyes of the world, if not within the range of Mr. Creel's mental vision.

In the fighting on the Piave when the Austrians were so disastrously beaten the success of the Italians was due to the fact that they had the reserves and the morale to strike back when the enemy delivered a blow and to follow him vigorously when he began to give ground. Owing to the presence of Americans in force on the Western front Gen. Foch has had ample force not only to stop the Huns at an advantageous point but to drive them pell mell towards a line of defense which they hope to be able to hold. Gen. Haig has been able to break the lines of the Germans and he had men enough to enlarge his operations till a retreat was forced along a front of more than 20 miles and his success was vastly aided by the boys in khaki.

The raincoat scandal has reached gigantic proportions. Some of our Democratic friends are telling us that during the Spanish war we had a beef scandal. Yes, that is true, and we want to remark that President McKinley purged his Cabinet of the member under whose administration this scandal became possible and the perpetrators of the frauds were punished. When President Wilson follows the precedent established by William McKinley, we shall be on a 50-50 basis as far as these two scandals are concerned.

Until quite recently there has been a tendency in this country to look for victory in the war through some act of Providence, such as the death of the Kaiser, the failure of crops in Germany, by pestilence or perhaps phenomenal good luck. That is all past now and we have settled down to the belief that the only way to win the war is to reduce the enemy's strength by "blood-letting." Having realized that Providence brings first aid to those who try to help themselves, we have settled down to real action.

Mr. Allen Benson who was the Socialist candidate for the Presidency two years ago has quit the party because he thinks it is "non-American." There are many honest men who believe in socialism not knowing its tendency towards anarchy such as that which has ruined Russia. The leaders of that misguided organization were non-American two years ago and the fact that Mr. Benson had not found it out shows that he was not a suitable man to be President of the United States.

The Federal Trade Commission has discovered that the meat packers have been profiteering. The discernment of this Commission is nothing less than marvelous. In order to conduct the meat business properly it must be put under government control. We sincerely hope that the director-general thereof will not prove to be a vegetarian.

"The people of this country will give a just verdict upon the service of the men who act for them, when the facts are such that no man can disguise or conceal them." The length of time taken by Mr. Hughes to get the facts relative to airplane non-production seems to indicate both disguise and concealment by somebody.

Governor Milliken.

He has given to the performance of the duties of Governor his entire time, and the amount of work that he has done has never been excelled by any other Governor the State has ever had. Governor Milliken has served the State of Maine well. He has worked in harmony with Maine's delegation in Congress and has done everything that he possibly could do to protect the interests of Maine and its citizens during a most trying period.—Portland Daily Press, March 2, 1918.

Governor Milliken's address at the Republican State Convention in Portland made a most profound impression upon the convention and he may return to his official duties conscious that this duty which he performed yesterday, this rendering of his account to his fellow Republicans, was done as all his official acts have been done, completely, with the highest purpose and with splendid results. Let the people of Maine remember that no public record made by any man advanced to public station can eclipse this one which the present Governor of Maine has rendered.—Portland Express-Advertiser, March 29, 1918.

The Governor apparently prefers to base his appeal for re-election on intra-State matters. Not the least among these is his own record or war preparations, a record in which even his bitterest political opponents can find nothing to condemn and a great deal which they must approve. Maine, under his leadership, was the first State in the Union to appropriate an adequate sum of money for war purposes—and this money was used in such essential measures as the equipment of our regiment for immediate service; the establishment of a fund for increasing the pay of our soldiers and the inauguration of the coast patrol. Furthermore, every department of the State's activities including the schools, the roads and agriculture has, under the Governor's guidance, been doing all that it could to help in the war program of the Nation.

From the standpoint of business management, Mr. Milliken's administration is certainly the best that the State has had in recent years, at least. Not a cent has been expended unwisely, and real business methods are in effect at Augusta. No one will doubt this who has followed the course of events there during the past fifteen months. Mr. Milliken will not be attacked on his business record, for he is not open to attack on those grounds.

It is unnecessary to attempt to mention all of the work the Governor has done, or inspired in the direction of reform and improvement. He has been a Governor of and for the people, clean, able, honest, open-minded and devoted as any executive could be to the duties of his high office.

He will be entirely safe, we believe, in appealing to the voters of Maine to re-elect him as an endorsement for the work he has already done.—Eastport Sentinel, April 3, 1918.

Probably Maine has never had a Governor who has worked harder or devoted anywhere near as much time to the discharge of his duties as has Governor Milliken. Since his inauguration in January, 1917, he has given his entire time to the affairs of the State. How many meetings he has been called upon to attend, how many speeches he has had to make, how many miles he has traveled and how many hours each day, including Sunday, he has worked it would be interesting to know. He has helped to keep Maine at the top of the loyal States in war work. Instead of decreasing, the Governor's duties are continually increasing with every day.

Governor Milliken need have no fear, as to the outcome of the September election. The people of Maine are not inclined to swap horses while crossing the stream. They know that the affairs of the State are now in good hands and they will want to keep those who are now on the job at the job until it is finished.—Portland Daily Press, June 29, 1918.

To me, as one citizen, it has been a matter of pride as I went here and there to say that Carl E. Milliken is my Governor. I have never received a favor from him. I have never been taken into his confidence as to his plans, but when I see a man who stands for right and against wrong, for good as against evil, for light as against darkness, for truth as against falsehood, I know that such men and such things as they stand for call for the same qualities in everyone.—From a sermon delivered by Dr. W. A. Bartlett, in Lewiston, March 8, 1918.

It is well that a Governor of Maine can go into a Council of the Southern House of Governors and sound her praises in no empty words. Maine's record stands in this war pre-eminent as it has in all other crises in which patriotism was involved. It is Dirigo (I lead) in supporting the Government as in blazing the way for industrial and Christian humanity that is the watch word for the State of Maine.—Daily Eastern Argus, October 17, 1917.

Editorial on Governor Milliken's speech in New York, October 15, 1917, before the Southern House of Governors. There are those who feel that the soul of America is dead, slowly atrophied through the money grabbing years, and then drowned utterly beneath a flood of foreign gold. New England's response, typical to the Nation's response to the time emergency, serves notice on mankind that the ancient spirit of America still lives, that her sons are still willing to do and dare and suffer in the righteous cause, that the soul of Lexington and Bunker Hill leaps forth again to champion those principles of freedom and democracy, of which our flag is the foremost symbol of the world.—From the speech of Governor Milliken on "New England's Response to the War Emergency" delivered before the House of Southern Governors, in New York, October 15, 1917.

Soldiers in France Need More Books.

The Belfast Free Library has received a request from the American Library Association's Headquarters in Washington for more books for this community for the men overseas.

The appeal from Washington states that new novels and good Western stories, whether new or old, are most needed. Books by Zane Grey, Rex Beach, Jack London, Ralph Connor, Owen Weiser and O. Henry are very popular. The Public Library announces that it will receive and forward all suitable books that are turned in. It urges the friends of the soldiers and sailors, many of whom have already responded most generously, to give more books.

The communication received by the Library from the Washington Headquarters states that over 600,000 books have been sent overseas. The supply is nearly exhausted, and several hundred thousand more will be needed soon by the six dispatch offices which are now shipping books to France. The books are packed at these dispatch offices in strong cases, so built that they serve as a bookcase.

They go on the decks of transports, in cargo vessels and in naval vessels. Those that go on the decks of transports are open so that the men may have reading matter for use on the voyage. All these books are gathered together again, however, replaced in the cases and delivered to the proper officials in France.

In France, the books are distributed by an experienced librarian, representing the American Library Association. Most of them go to Y. M. C. A., Red Cross and Salvation Army huts, hospitals and canteens. Others go directly to chaplains and officers.

Abington, Mass., has a Sunday school one hundred years old. Nearly 1,000,000 female clerks are employed in England.

The timber possibilities of British North Borneo are to be investigated by an expert from the United States whom the government has employed.

Blankets or other articles left in an automobile can be fastened to a recently patented chain, which rings an alarm bell if a thief should try to take them.

The army of the Netherlands has been provided with a portable motion-picture show that is transported from post to post on a specially designed motortruck.

W. C. T. U.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is an integral part of the United Committee on War Temperance Activities for the Army and Navy. Its members are leaders in the State Councils of Defense, and it has its own special war activities, through several departments. Up to last November the W. C. T. U. has spent at least $100,000 for comfort bags, since the war began—for it has been 30 years that we have been providing these bags of convenience, and merely increased the output when the need arose.

At the last National W. C. T. U. convention contributions were asked for field kitchens, to serve hot soup and cocoa to the soldiers just out of the trenches. Thirteen of these have been purchased, costing $9,800, and "still there are more to follow." Southern California alone provided five. Four ambulances have been sent to the front—two of these being from Southern California. $3,282 was paid in this case. Twenty stromotographs, at a cost of $10,000, have been bought for the great cantonments. These have been of great service—educational and amusing. The American W. C. T. U. has helped the fatherless children of France to the extent of $8,817.50, making possible the care, or adoption of 239 children. Besides this, $325.81 have been raised for Syrian, Belgian, Armenian, and other relief. These amounts total $37,225.31, and is, after all, but a small part of the organization's actual war relief expenditures.

Many States are giving special service, as in Massachusetts, where the State W. C. T. U. has bought an $11,000 property at Ayer for service to the men at Camp Devens.

The money for these enterprises and many others has come a little at a time from faithful members and friends. No undertaking was started on an entirely cash basis, probably. But W. C. T. U. women have faith in this good cause, their friends, and their own efforts, and get out of debt as soon as possible.—E. F. M.

One of the most delightful events of the season was the Field Day of Happy Valley Chapter, O. E. S. held Aug. 15th at Lake Passagassawaukeag, with headquarters at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Jones. The 15th was a perfect day, the like of which Mother Nature has rather grudgingly spread for us poor mortals this season. In the early morning autos began running to and fro carrying passengers, some thirty-five gathering on the broad verandas with sewing and merry chatter to while away the hours. At one o'clock a most delicious dinner was served, consisting of fish chowder, cucumbers, stuffed olives and pickles, sandwiches, all kinds of assorted cakes and pies, bananas and coffee. A pleasing note in the decorations was the masses of fragrant water lilies in bowls and as place cards, large quantities having been gathered for that purpose by some of the younger members. When all were about to be seated, Brother Sanders Stiles proposed the toast "Happy Valley chapter, O. E. S. and our hosts of today," three cheers and a tiger were given with hearty good will. Rowing and bathing was indulged in during the afternoon hours, and veranda calls made at the neighboring cottages. Four cottages have been completed thus far, those being of a high order of comfort and convenience, leaving nothing to be desired as summer homes, and more are to follow. That of N. S. Cook was built first, Percy Grant immediately followed, and last season Elmer Roberts and W. S. Jones added their cottages to the row. No daintier little gem of a lake can be found in the State of Maine, to our thinking, than the beauty spot three miles from our village named by the Indians Passagassawaukeag.

The following are extracts taken from letters received by Mrs. Frances A. Merritt from her son, who is "Over There." These letters were written in June and July:

Co. L 39 Inf.

Dear Mother: Will write you a short letter tonight so that when you do get mail from me you will get a whole lot of it. I got 9 letters, 4 from you and grandma, 4 from Frances, and 1 from my classmate. It is needless to say I read yours first. The U. S. is reasonable, we can write if we are sick, and I would let you know if I were, but I wrote that I was never better. Hope you have got some of my letters by this time. The days are very warm and the sun sets very late but the nights are cold. I certainly ought to be tough when I get home. We do a whole lot of exercising and that is all good. Calisthenics at 8.30 now. Bayonet fighting is very interesting and satisfying as Jerry is a coward when it comes to cold steel. We do a lot of shooting and the training is quite intensive. The gas mask is not so disagreeable now. Think I will have to close now. Got some fine soup today. If it was over there it would be imported stuff. How strange.

Lots of love to all.

Raymond.

July 14, 1918.

Dear Mother: Haven't time to write but just a few lines as it is most supper time and mail is collected immediately after we eat. Received 3 letters from you last week. Now don't worry about me. Have been to Paris and had a good time but don't like the place very well. Went to the theater there, but after the parade spent most of the time wandering around looking for friends, but found none I knew. There was a register book in the Y. M. C. A. for frat. men but saw none from P. K. K. but there were some Maine men from other fraternities. We stayed in Grand Palace while there. It was some place in its day. We have camped here quite a while for us, but presume will move again soon. When we came into the village it was practically evacuated but the people are moving in again. Have been up to the lines digging trenches. I know what the big shells sound like in the air but don't mind it now. The first one made a lot of us sit up though, but no damage has been done to the regiment to amount to anything. It's a pretty good regiment after all. Won't write more now but will write again this week. Love to all and lots for yourself.

Raymond.

Mr. Merritt is in the regular army. His letters will be of interest to his friends in Brooks and the surrounding towns and will be printed as fast as received.

Rheumatism Arrested

If you suffer with lame muscles or stiffened joints look out for impurities in the blood, because each attack gets more acute and stubborn. To arrest rheumatism you must improve your general health and purify your blood; the cod liver oil in Scott's Emulsion is Nature's great blood-maker while it also strengthens the organs to expel the impurities. Scott's is helping thousands who could not find other relief.

Colonial Theatre.

Gladys Clark and Superior Company in Popular Plays, Thursday, Friday, Saturday Evenings and Saturday Matinee. Excellent Photoplays Next Week.

Commencing Thursday, August 22nd, the winsome and talented actress, Gladys Clark and her company of superior excellence, will be the attraction at the Colonial for three nights and a Saturday matinee. Seats on sale now for evening performances, 28c, 39c and 55c. Saturday matinee, no seats reserved, children 17c, adults 28c. On the opening night, Julie Herne's play, "A Young Girl's Romance," a story of an "outsider" will be the bill. It is a real American play, being the story of Katie Murray, a western creation of femininity. A cowgirl straight from Pocatello, Idaho, Katie Murray is a character, so clearly drawn that she goes out of the theatre with you after the show is over. She lives in your heart, you'll fall in love with her. "A Young Girl's Romance" shows all the vicissitudes that come into Katie's young life. Tells how she overcomes them with her rugged philosophy of the plains, how she comes in contact with unworldly spirits and in the end conquers them. She meets Peter Cortland Crandall, scion of a wealthy eastern family, who is on business at Pocatello. During a serious illness through which Katie nurses him, they are married. His family physician, Dr. Barlow, who answers a hurry call to the youth's bedside, does not like the plain western style of Katie and her Peter away from her influence, not knowing they are married. They arrive back to Peter's New York home, only to be followed by Katie. The remainder of the story will be told tonight.

On Friday evening, "Playthings," a drama in three acts by Sidney Toler, will be offered. In spite of its title, which might well suggest a play of childhood, Mr. Toler's drama embodies some of the most sensational situations and climaxes that have been seen on the stage in many a day. It is a play for grown ups who are not afraid to look life as it is, not as it ought to be, in the face, powerful and fearless in its indictment of a certain class of society, who, as one of them cries in the bitterness of her regret, are the "playthings of men." The play tells of the human struggles of one of these human playthings, who, betrayed and cast aside, strives to regain a place in society, only to be met, when she has well-nigh attained her goal, with the sinister influences of him who is responsible for her darkened past. It is here that there is one of the most powerful emotional scenes that the stage has been given in years, and it is followed by an unexpected and soul-stirring climax, which, it may truly be said, totally eclipses any play "surprise" feature in recent theatrical history. Truly, dealing as it does with startling frankness and vigor with the everlasting problems that confront society, "Playthings" is bound to raise such discussion here as has not been accorded any other drama in a decade.

Saturday evening, David Belasco's great American drama, "The Heart of Wexona" will be given. The play for Saturday matinee will be announced later. Secure seats for all evening performances now to avoid disappointment.

Feature Photoplays Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The many admirers of Douglas Fairbanks, the genial athletic Artcraft star, who will be seen in his newest photocomedy, "Mr. Fix-It," next Monday, will find this picture one of the most delightful they ever have enjoyed, not only because it presents Mr. Fairbanks in a new and novel role, but because of the ennobling message of its theme—that of winning happiness by making others happy. The situations of this unusual story are at once impressive and mirth-provoking to a degree. Mr. Fairbanks essays the role of a man who "fixes" things generally, from a broken chair to a human heart. It often gets him into trouble, but he gets out again with the characteristic Fairbanksian smile, ingenuity and athletics. From the receptions accorded this great picture elsewhere, we are convinced that if you fail to see it, you may have occasion to regret it. We assure you that we will be delighted to have you attend a display at our theatre and urge you to come early.

"Troublemakers," on Tuesday, featuring the William Fox "Baby Grand" stars, Jane and Katherine Lee, is a rare blending of drama and comedy, providing an excellent vehicle for these little stars, and they make the most of their opportunities in it. As troublemakers they are on the job every minute from start to finish, and the fun they manage to develop dominates the story throughout. In "Troublemakers" they are children of a young widow who, after the death of her husband in a Western city, returned to the village where she had been brought up and where as a girl she had a romance of the heart with a then young attorney. The love is revived, but is threatened with interruption when the lawyer declines to undertake the defense of a young man charged with murder, and whose life is finally saved by Jane and Katherine, who cherished a confidence in his innocence notwithstanding strong circumstantial evidence indicating his guilt.

We Open the Door of Ownership To Every Customer of Company

THE QUESTION: "Why does the Central Maine Power Company want its customers to buy preferred stock when it could sell this stock with so much less effort to outside capitalists?"

THE ANSWER: Our big purpose is to get our customers to become financial partners with us—to make it easy for the people who use our electricity and gas to buy a proprietary interest in the Company and to share in its profits.

We seek the partnership of the citizens in the territory we serve in order to increase public friendship and goodwill and to bring about conditions wherein the organization shall be owned largely by the people it serves. We desire further to increase the popularity and usefulness of our Company.

Customer Ownership Brings Public and Company in Closer Harmony --Increases Welfare of Both

THIS customer ownership movement will make the people financial partners of our Company and will still preserve the good points of private ownership and operation, among them responsibility, initiative and economy. It not only aids us to raise the funds necessary to develop our property to meet the growing demands of our territory but it mutualizes the Company and enables our customers to share in the returns from the capital employed usefully in serving them.

Believing this, we are offering this stock to our customers on easy terms.

We want the opportunity of telling you how easy these terms are, how liberal the return and how safe the investment. At the office of the Company they will be glad to supply this information—and to accept your subscription for this stock, if you so desire.

ATTENTION RED CROSS WORKERS. Material for a large order of surgical dressings is beginning to arrive and we shall need workers shortly, but we shall not open this room until the scarlet fever has abated. We urge all workers at either room not to attend if they have been in any way exposed to the disease. In all probability after September first the surgical dressing work will be lessened, owing to the large supply of dressings on hand. The great call will be for refugee garments and already our sewing is daily increasing in volume and we are in great need of sewers. It may be many of you do not enjoy this sewing as much as the other work, but that is not the point. It is our duty and privilege to do what is most needed, and therefore I make an urgent request for more volunteers in sewing. The number is far too small.—Louise Hazeltine, Chairman Waldo County Chapter A. R. C.

The same mail brought Mr. and Mrs. Hazeltine a letter from their elder son, Major Charles B. ON THE WATER FRONT. Work is progressing rapidly on the five-masted schooner, Jennie Flood Kreger, building in the Frost yard. As soon as she is put into the water the keel of a four-master of 210 feet—only 10 feet shorter than the Kreger—will be laid. L. A. Coombs is making the drawings for the blueprints, and they are specimens of neatness showing a handsome and trim model. The lines are on a scale of three-sixteenths of an inch to the foot. Mr. Coombs is building at his shop a handsome life boat 24 foot long for the Kreger. It has deck forward and aft with space for water barrel and provisions. Two different parties, evidently government inspectors, have recently been taking dimensions of the shore front, particularly of the Pendleton yard. L. A. Howard, now in charge of the Pendleton yard, says they did not give their names or state what the purpose of their visit was. E. J. Tilley, formerly in charge here, is now in the Pendleton yard at Mystic, Conn., but writes that he may return later, if the yard is used.

He briefly referred to the distribution of the million dollars appropriated by the last legislature for the dependent mothers; the appointment of outside men to public positions, and appealed to the voters to support the National party in power as Germany might mistake a Republican victory as a lack of confidence and support of the party in power, on the issues of the war, however well we might understand it locally.

BAGDAD ASTONISHED BY FIRE ENGINE

Peat in Maine.

For several years occasional references have been made to the supply of peat in Maine, but not a great deal of attention has been paid to the same, owing largely to the ease with which we secured a plentiful supply of coal, and also the comparative low cost and availability of wood in this State.

Now we are facing a vastly different condition. It is probable that this year and for some years to come—at least for the duration of the war—our supply of coal will be limited and during this space of time, owing to scarcity of labor, wood will not only be high, but in many localities extremely difficult to get.

For these reasons peat becomes a more important subject for consideration here in this State where the peat deposits are ample, and where it needs simply the education of our people as to the preparation and as to the use of peat to start a campaign, which will result in a great deal for our State, both in comfort and in actual money value.

Under test conditions in Europe, in comparison with steam coal of good quality, peat, when fired under boilers, has been found to be worth about five-ninths of a ton of good coal. Under the usual methods of firing, however, there is likely to be a greater loss of heat units from the coal than from the peat, especially if the latter is in the form of air-dried machine peat. The machine-dried peat does not clinker or give off any volatile matter in the form of black smoke. It burns up completely, leaving only a powdery-like ash which is small in bulk compared with the usual fuel. It makes a good fuel bed in the furnace and burns with a long, bright, clear flame, without smoke or sulphurous gases, so that neither flues, grates or boiler plates are corroded or clogged.

In burning peat it is of advantage not to stir the fire, which causes the fuel to break up and drop through the grates, or to give it too much intensity.

As a domestic fuel peat is clean, can be made to burn slowly or rapidly as desired, by regulating the drafts, is very easily handled and is so efficient that it commands a ready sale at good prices to all who have had an opportunity to try it. It would seem, therefore, that there is a good field for its introduction and use in Maine, both for domestic and manufacturing purposes.

In Maine there are so many small peat bogs which, although too small for exploitation on a large scale, could be made to furnish fuel to a single small factory or to a community for a long time.

The principal points to be borne in mind in such exploitation are that the simplest equipment that is well designed to produce the desired quantity of a salable form of fuel is the one most likely to be successful and that every added process of handling adds many times to the first cost of equipment and to the difficulties of producing an article which can be sold for sufficient to pay the cost of preparation.

The area of peat land actually tested in Maine is estimated at 25 square miles. The average depth of the peat is about ten feet. It is calculated that the bogs tested are capable of yielding at least thirty-four million short tons of air-dried machine peat, which at $3 a ton would represent a value of more than one hundred million dollars.

It is probable that the deposits tested form only from one-tenth to one-fifth of the total peat resources of this State, hence, it can readily be seen that we have on our hand a product extremely valuable, both from the standpoint of money and perhaps more important at present, the standpoint of economy of fuel.

Seattle Women Plan German Boycott.

Through the columns of Popular Mechanics Magazine, Seattle women are asking the women of America to join them in a league for the protection of our soldiers and sailors who have been taken prisoners by Germany. The pledge which is to be signed makes use of a very effective argument in appealing to the self-interest of the enemy, so that he will accord decent treatment to American prisoners.

Dr. A. O. Thomas of Augusta, State superintendent of public schools, reports that the teacher situation in the State is much better than was thought possible, a few months ago, largely due to the fact that many towns have increased salaries. There will be enough teachers for all schools and the general situation is bright. The coal situation is giving school authorities much thought but Mr. Thomas is confident that everything will work out all right.

Costs you 1¢ A DOSE

Can you think of any cheaper way to overcome the ordinary kinds of sickness, that nearly everybody has occasionally, than by using a strictly reliable prescription or preparation of medicines that costs only ONE CENT a dose? Isn't it real economy to have a bottle always at hand to use when you feel bilious or if your food distresses, or your headache? Surely there's nothing like the original "L.F." medicine to relieve slow-acting bowels or chronic constipation. This condition often leads to serious illness; relieve it with the true "L.F." made only by the L.F. Medicine Co., Portland, Me. Ask your dealer.

What it Means if 105,000,000 People Refuse to Economize on Clothing

NATION HURT IN MANY WAYS

One of Numerous Cases in Point Vividly Illustrates the Vital Necessity of "Saving to Save the Country" in War Time.

By PAUL M. WARBURG, Vice Governor of the Federal Reserve Board

I am one of one hundred and five million of inhabitants of the United States; my duties are the same as those of every other true American, and those of every other true American are the same as mine. Whatever I contribute to the cause of the country, I may expect to see done—each in his own way—by 105,000,000 people.

Let us suppose for the purpose of illustration that I decide that I shall effect a saving on clothes. I might select boots, automobiles, umbrellas, or any other article for which I regularly spend my money, as I have no desire to single out any one commodity, but clothes lend themselves to my thought, so I name them. If I make up my mind, then, at this juncture that I wear old clothes is more respectable than to be seen in new ones; if I decide to buy one new suit of clothes less than I usually purchase each year, and if I figure that suit to cost no more than $10—the country as a whole, should we all pull together and act on the same lines, would save thereby over one billion dollars. It is true that in dealing with our 105,000,000 population we include children and many poor people that could not save ten dollars each because they never spend more for clothes than they absolutely must. But on the other hand $10 is a much smaller amount than the average man or woman spends for a new suit of clothes. The assumption that a billion dollars could easily be saved on clothes may, therefore, be accepted as conservative.

The first thought that occurs to us in this connection is, that by this saving in clothes over one billion dollars would be freed to be invested in Liberty loan bonds. That is the first important and most obvious result. But there are other economic results involved in this saving that are of far greater importance than the mere saving of money.

Economic Results Are Vast.

Let us consider first what one billion dollars' worth of clothes means. Suppose they were half-wool and half-cotton and that the value of the raw material constituted only 50 per cent of the price paid by the ultimate consumer, that would, at the present price of 60 cents per pound for wool and 30 cents per pound for cotton respectively, represent 208,334 tons of wool and 416,667 tons of cotton. Can you imagine how much freight space would be required on water and on land, in moving this mass of raw material? Do you realize that if these bales were put into freight cars, assuming a loading capacity of 16 tons per car for wool and 13 cents per car for cotton, this would represent 13,021 box cars loaded with wool and 32,056 box cars loaded with cotton? Assuming 75 cars per train, there would be about 600 trains; the total length of these trains would be approximately 314 miles, and these trains, hauled by 600 engines, when standing in line would approximately cover the distance from Baltimore to Pittsburgh? Can you imagine the amount of coal consumed in first transporting and then weaving this raw material into cloth? Can you imagine the number of hands employed in these processes? And then consider that more coal, more labor and more transportation are required in distributing the cloth and again more labor and more material in converting it into clothes, and again more labor and transportation in retailing the finished product to the final consumer.

Let us be mindful that all the time these processes are being carried on, Uncle Sam is short of the men necessary to dispatch his war work, and furthermore that shortage of coal and the clogging of the wheels of transportation have stopped his progress at most critical moments and in the present emergency continue to remain a constant menace to the country.

May Cost Your Son's Life.

My new suit of clothes means, therefore, delay for our military operations; delay in transporting and equipping men, and in sending to them, and to our allies, the supplies they need; means increased losses and a longer duration of the war. My new suit of clothes may cost, therefore, the life of my son.

The supply of goods, of labor and of transportation is limited. It is a matter of common agreement that this limited supply is not sufficient freely to satisfy all wants and that unrestricted attempts on the part of each individual to satisfy his own requirements may lead to a wild scramble and destructive competition with the government, resulting in fatal delay and endless increase in prices.

The loaf of bread available for ourselves and for our allies is not large enough to "go around" if we all want to eat more than is absolutely necessary for our maintenance. It is every body's duty, therefore, at this time to "tighten his belt" and to make a genuine effort to live on as thin a slice of the loaf as he can. Unless that be done we must buy additional food in neutral countries, thereby using tonnage that should be kept available for our military operations and increasing our difficulties in adjusting our trade balances with neutral countries.

Hurts Uncle Sam in Many Ways. To return to our story of the suit of clothes: During last year the United States had to import 421,000,000 pounds of wool representing a value of about $172,000,000. About half of this came from Argentina. Our suits of clothes called for a substantial portion of this wool and therefore to that extent robbed Uncle Sam of the use of his ships. Moreover, our factories being busy in producing the things required for the prosecution of the war and our home consumption still proceeding at almost top speed, the quantity of goods available for shipment to Peru for copper, and so on, is insufficient. As a consequence the United States had to pay for more goods in South America than South America has had to pay for goods bought in the United States, thereby causing a decline of dollar exchange in these neutral countries. This shrinkage in the price of the dollar means that it has lost a corresponding part of its purchasing power in neutral countries.

The scarcity of goods available for our export trade has thus become a serious obstacle in our way in trying to secure at reasonable prices or in adequate quantities some of the things that we absolutely require from foreign countries.

My suit of clothes has hurt Uncle Sam, therefore, in several ways: I have consumed more wool than necessary and thereby forced the United States to import a correspondingly large quantity of this article; I have consumed more cotton goods than necessary and to that extent have deprived Uncle Sam of the means with which to pay for the minimum of wool which we may have to import.

Clothing But One of Many.

I have used the illustration of a new suit of clothes; it would be easy, though somewhat tedious, to show that we have been dealing only with one case in point. The country is short at this time of hides and skins and has to import large quantities from neutral countries because we are extravagant in our individual purchases of shoes. Similarly, though we are the largest producers of copper, we are forced to import copper from Peru because our civilian population has not begun sufficiently to curtail its use. In like manner we might ask ourselves if at all excusable that at this time we still manufacture such articles as silk stockings, when every thread of silk must be imported, while we could use our own cotton?

It is impossible and unnecessary to enumerate the many articles that are in a similar position. Many billions of dollars can easily be saved when once we are capable of realizing the cumulative effect of individual "saving," take the word "saving" in its larger meaning, as involving not only money, but also goods and services. If every individual could be made to see with his own eyes that neglect of saving of this sort means decreased war efficiency, a propaganda of the war, and a larger number of casualties; if every one who has a son or dear relative on the fighting lines across the water could be made to feel that millions of small savings directly affect his boy—there would be no doubt that we could secure the most conscientious and enthusiastic cooperation of all the people. Thus far we must say with regret—of 105,000,000 people, 100,000,000 do not see the connection between the suit of clothes and the life of the boy.

Germany's Enforced Economy. Germany's military success is largely predicated upon her ability to center the entire national effort upon the business of war. It is safe to say that she never would have been able to bear the burdens of the fight as well as she has during these four long years had it not been for the enforced savings in material, money and men brought about through the British blockade. If it had not been for the stern necessities created by that blockade the German people would not have been willing to submit to famine rations as to food, clothes, shoes and other similar articles. Industries catering to the appetites and extravagances of the masses would have kept men and material from the government instead of making everything available for the war work of the government, and financially she would have exhausted herself by buying things abroad that she could go without or for which she had to strain her ingenuity in finding or creating substitutes.

It is difficult to bring about drastic economy without the compulsion exercised by hard necessity. For us the problem is whether or not, of our own free will, we shall be able to establish our own voluntary blockade against waste and extravagance. It is a problem whose solution requires the greatest intelligence and the greatest degree of unselfish patriotism. It is a problem that will put the spirit of our people to the severest test.

The government is not devoid of means of promoting economy. The war industries board, the food and fuel administrations, the capital issues committee, the department of labor and department of agriculture all move in the same direction of increasing necessary production and decreasing unnecessary consumption.

Full success, however, may be counted upon only if the whole-hearted cooperation of every citizen of the United States can be enlisted.
